

OVER-ATTACHED VIEWERS OR STALKERS FEELING ENTITLED TO ACCESS

WHY IT MATTERS

Some viewers may develop an unusually intense attachment to families they watch regularly. A small minority can begin to feel entitled to personal replies, private information, meetings or physical access to the family despite having no genuine relationship with them.

1 MAINTAIN CLEAR AUDIENCE BOUNDARIES

Watching the family doesn't make somebody part of the family.

2 NEVER PUBLISH HOME DETAILS

Personal access must not extend to knowing exactly where children live.

3 DON'T REWARD INTRUSIVE BEHAVIOUR

Repeated boundary crossing shouldn't earn extra attention.

4 LIMIT PRIVATE MESSAGING

Children should not privately communicate with adult viewers.

5 TAKE UNINVITED VISITS SERIOUSLY

Showing up at homes, schools or clubs is not normal fan behaviour.

6 KEEP ROUTINES PRIVATE

Predictability makes unwanted encounters easier.

7 USE BLOCKING AND MODERATION TOOLS

Persistent intrusive accounts should not retain unlimited access.

8 DOCUMENT SERIOUS HARASSMENT

Keep records where behaviour becomes threatening or obsessive.

9 TEACH CHILDREN NOT TO TRUST RECOGNITION

A stranger knowing their name doesn't make that person safe.

10 REDUCE EXPOSURE IF NECESSARY

Audience growth is never more important than physical safety.

BOTTOM LINE

An audience is invited to watch content, not to enter a child's private life.
